Finding What You Need: Support is Out There

Cancer support groups provide a setting in which both cancer patients and caregivers can talk about living with cancer with others who may be having similar experiences. Although the personal experience of being diagnosed with cancer varies greatly, everyone needs a good support system to cope with the different stages of the cancer journey. Apart from having to manage the physical challenges, people with cancer and their caregivers face many worries and concerns unique to their situation. They may need help coping with the emotional, as well as the practical aspects of the disease. In fact, attention to the emotional burden of having cancer is often a part of a patient's treatment plan.

Support can come in many different ways. Support groups that meet face-to-face often come to mind, however, if one is not available there are other options. Support groups can be facilitated online, or over the phone. Cancer blogs or one-to-one mentorship programs may also be an option.

- Mayo Clinic's Living with Cancer blog is an online forum where cancer survivors and loved ones can share stories, hope and strength. Visit www.mayoclinic.com/livingwithcancer.
- Cancer Care provides online and telephone support options 7 days a week from a licensed social worker. Visit www.cancercare.org.
- The American Cancer Society's Cancer Survivors Network is an online support group for those who are unable or prefer not to meet face-to-face. Individuals with rare types of cancer may also find this network helpful.
- The American Cancer Society's Look Good...Feel Better programs for women help individuals manage skin changes and hair loss due to cancer treatment.
- The American Cancer Society's Man to Man program is a face-to-face support group for prostate cancer patients and their families. Call 1-800-227-2345 for locations.
- The American Cancer Society's I Can Cope is an educational program for people facing cancer that offers information and answers to many cancer topics through community classes, as well as online modules. To find a community group call 1-800-227-2345. Online modules are available at www.cancer.org/onlineclasses.
- Imerman Angels matches individuals touched by cancer with someone who has fought and survived the same type of cancer. Cancer caregivers also receive one-on-one connections with other caregivers and survivors. Call 312-274-5529 or go to www.imermanangels.org/.
- Various classes might be offered at your treatment facility, such as relaxation or meditation classes.
- Religious or spiritual support may be available from a hospital chaplain or an individual's home church.
